Arkansas Reads One Book

Economics Arkansas is pleased to be assisting with a Family Financial Literacy Initiative for grades K-5 in partnership with Read to Them. Five school districts in Arkansas will be piloting this program this spring and next fall.

The premise of this initiative is for schools and families to read The Lemonade War book together and discuss economic and financial literacy concepts that appear in each chapter. Schools will reinforce the concepts through engaging classroom activities. Each participating district is creating district wide culminating events.

Economics Arkansas has developed a webpage to house resources for teachers, students and parents to extend and apply these concepts through lessons, games and family activities. To assess these free resources, click here.

Economic Concept Connector Cards

Economics Arkansas is excited to give you a sneak peek of our latest resource: Economic Concept Connector Cards. This new resource consists of K-5 cards/guides bundling economic concepts into 12 statements that tell the “story” of economics in a thoughtfully-sequenced manner. Each durable, eight-page, fold-out guide contains a concept background and examples, an introductory activity, three reproducible activity pages with teaching notes, key points for students to understand, and extension ideas (activities, children’s literature connections, online connections, writing prompts, and more). Some cards will be available this summer, and additional resources placed on our website.

The project development team consists of Deborah Shearer, Geanie Channell, and Dr. Curt Anderson.

Rejuvenating Your Economics Class

Are you a new or experienced middle school economics teacher or a curriculum specialist? This one-day program is designed to help you refresh your economic understanding and to provide dynamic teaching methodologies to engage students in group structured activities that will complement a variety of economic principles.
